

Things Fall Apart (1958) by Chinua Achebe is a colonial novel about the life of Okonkwo. He is a respected member of the Umuofia clan located in modern-day Nigeria. He is fearful of appearing weak and lazy like his father, and his burning need to be the embodiment of masculinity becomes his greatest weakness.